Press Release

New Jersey Firm Offers a “Virtual” Solution

Princeton, NJ October 27, 2010: Compliance Consulting Group (CCG) announced today the creation of a team of seasoned compliance professionals to operate their revolutionary “Virtual Compliance Office”(VCO). The decision to create the new product, VCO, was driven by two factors; the dynamic regulatory environment and requests from existing CCG clients.

“The current regulatory environment is constantly changing. Our clients are faced with a dynamic set of rules and regulations that, if not followed, can jeopardize their very existence. Combine that with the overwhelming expense of dedicated staff and multiple sources of third party advice, this product basically created itself,” said Rich Lani, President of CCG.

VCO is offered to firms regulated by the NFA. The VCO model is pretty straight forward and offers three basic tiers of security. Initially, customers go through a vetting that includes a standardized critique of existing documents, policies and procedures. After signing off on the items, CCG offers compliance meetings via web-conferencing that include discussions with key personal, training and a question and answer period for all employees of client firms. The last component of VCO is daily access to CCG’s staff of expert consultants. Clients will use a number of methods to contact CCG in keeping with the concept of “virtually” walking into the compliance office for advice.

“CCG wants to offer our combined years of experience and current real time problem solving abilities to our clients in a cost effective manner. A seasoned Compliance Officer can be prohibitively expensive. Utilizing a third party may lower the expense while gaining access to some of the best and most current experience out there!” added Mr. Lani.

To help potential clients get acquainted with their particular services, CCG offers a FREE Consultation through the company website, www.consultCCG.com. Visitors simply complete a form requesting a call at a specified time and date and a working compliance professional will give them a call. During these calls, clients ask questions to determine if CCG is the answer they have been looking for. “I am surprised potential clients did not realize they could have access to these services and collective experience at a price that may actually cut costs!” said Tom Lorenz, a VP at CCG. “Our relationships with law firms and accounting firms combined with our consultants’ specific industry experience means we can be a one stop shop for ALL compliance needs at rates that will most likely be BETTER than your firm currently pays or anticipates paying! I wish I would have run cross a group like CCG when I was negotiating the compliance jungle at firms I owned,” added Mr. Lorenz.

With services like CCG offers and the core competency they have assembled, it seems like a win win for CCG and their clients. Why not go to www.consultCCG.com to schedule a free consultation to decide if CCG and VCO are the solution you have been looking for, virtually.
